

Is Your Organization Prepared For The Second Wave Of The Current Pandemic??

David Howell, President of AMI Business Resilience Inc., CANADA

AMI Business Resilience has rapidly emerged as the pre-eminent providers of fully integrated Business Continuity Planning, Disaster Recovery Planning, Pandemic Planning, and Emergency Management.

AMI Business Resilience works with many of the largest corporations in North America, the U.K. and Middle East in sectors such as Banking, Telecom, Property Management, Pharmaceutical, Mining, Transportation and Logistics, Retail, Aerospace and Education.

David J. Howell, President of AMI, will share thoughts on the importance of Pandemic Planning in order to continue growing your business and not being excluded from Requests for Proposals, given the growing prerequisite for the existence of certified and tested Pandemic Plans among North American companies.

He will provide insights on the depth of information required in a Pandemic Plan to pass the scrutiny of your clients and ensure that there is an understanding of the necessity of a Pandemic Plan being integrated into your overall Business Continuity.

We're in Phase Six of the First Wave

Is Your Organization ready for the Second Wave??

History has proven that Pandemics come in three waves. It will be imperative to have plans in place, by as early as Fall '09 to sustain critical functions within your business for a period of eight to twelve weeks. History has also proven that the second wave in a Pandemic can be devastating.

A plan to shut down a business is not a plan.

FEMA maintains that most companies that exit their market for even one week for any reason, are out of business within two years.
